1. Identify the main idea or topic of the passage. The main idea is that the author is discussing the importance of maintaining a healthy diet and exercise routine for overall well-being.
2. Identify the supporting details or evidence provided. The author provides several pieces of evidence to support their claim, including:
- A study conducted by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) showing that regular exercise can reduce the risk of heart disease by up to 50%.
  - A survey of 1,000 adults showing that those who exercise regularly are more likely to report feeling happy and satisfied with their lives.
  - A comparison of the health outcomes of two groups of people: one group that exercised regularly and another group that did not. The group that exercised regularly had significantly lower rates of obesity, high blood pressure, and diabetes.
3. Identify the author's purpose or intent. The author's purpose is to persuade the reader to adopt a healthy lifestyle by providing them with evidence and information about the benefits of exercise and a balanced diet.
4. Identify the author's tone or attitude. The author's tone is informative and persuasive, using a clear and concise writing style to convey their message.
5. Identify the author's use of rhetorical devices or persuasive techniques. The author uses several rhetorical devices to make their argument more compelling, including:
- Repetition: The author repeats the phrase "regular exercise" multiple times throughout the passage to emphasize its importance.
  - Statistics: The author uses statistics to provide concrete evidence for their claims, such as the 50% reduction in heart disease risk mentioned in the first bullet point.
  - Comparison: The author compares the health outcomes of two groups of people to highlight the benefits of exercise.
6. Identify the author's use of credible sources or references. The author cites the National Institutes of Health (NIH) as a credible source for the study mentioned in the first bullet point, which adds credibility to their argument.
7. Identify the author's use of emotional appeals or persuasive language. The author uses persuasive language to appeal to the reader's emotions, such as the phrase "feeling happy and satisfied with their lives" mentioned in the second bullet point.
8. Identify the author's use of logical appeals or persuasive language. The author uses logical appeals to present their argument in a clear and logical manner, such as the comparison of health outcomes between the two groups of people mentioned in the third bullet point.
9. Identify the author's use of rhetorical questions or persuasive language. The author does not use rhetorical questions in this passage.
10. Identify the author's use of persuasive language or rhetorical devices. The author uses persuasive language throughout the passage to encourage the reader to adopt a healthy lifestyle, such as the phrase "overall well-being" mentioned in the first sentence.
